The Public Is Quick To Recognize Service.

Not in the mercantile history of El Paso has a new store sprung into popularity as quickly as our Hoover's Banner building store. The public appreciates service and accepted from the beginning the metropolitan manner in which the new store is being conducted. The fountain particularly has gained a regular list of customers which is growing every day. If you have not yet become acquainted with this service, do so the next time you want a delicious drink, need a prescription filled or there are toilet articles to be purchased.

MEXICANS BUILD PRISON STOCKADE

Federals Formerly Interned at Fort Bliss Are Constructing New Prison Camp at Fort Wingate.

Gallup, N. M., May 6.—Two thousand Mexican federal prisoners, transferred to Fort Wingate from Fort Bliss, Tex., were put to work today at building their own prison stockade of posts and barbed wire. Armed guards of United States soldiers supervised the work. The stockade will surround the shelter tents of the prisoners. The second division of four trains of prisoners from Fort Bliss was expected to reach here during the day.

The arrival of the first division was a picturesque sight to the New Mexicans gathered to watch the strange procession.

Parallel lines of United States troops flanked the double file of Mexicans, and squads of infantrymen, who acted as guides, preceded and followed each company. The occupants of each car being formed separately.

In striking contrast with the ragged and stouping forms were the uniforms and their families, all well dressed. Mrs. Salazar refused to leave the train until she had brushed her hair and dabbed her face with powder.

Fort Wingate was abandoned several years ago under the army concentration plan, and now only a few United States troops of the 12th United States cavalry from Fort Meade, S. D., who will act as guards.
